"I still have not come down from Cloud 9. Jessica and Michael's wedding was everything we hoped it would be and more."
"Everything was as close to perfect as anyone could expect. We had so many compliments on what a wonderful and loving event it was." These are two comments out of many thank you notes Tosca received from her clients.

When Tosca first meets with the bride and her family she finds out what is essential to them. Preserving her clients' vision is of utmost importance to her. After the booking she prepares personalized binders with checklists for each family containing contracts, a vendor directory, the payment schedule, and floor plans.

"Weddings are my passion," she smiles; her cool and calm style, as well as enthusiasm and dedication are still the same as when we met the first time. "I still carry my two large emergency basket to each wedding," she told me the other day, remembering how impressed I was finding not only aspirin, cleaning solution, and sewing material, but also a cummerbund and a spare wedding ring to be prepared for every eventuality.

During the past years, Tosca's fame and the budgets of her events have grown as she designs more extravagant wedding productions. Examples are the winter wonderland at San Francisco City Hall, the thousands of sunflowers at the winery, the tropical theme at Kohl Mansion where each room was decorated in a different color theme, or the East Indian wedding lasting several days. She loves to surprise her clients with personal touches on the day of the wedding. For a poetry enthusiast, Tosca placed framed poems and verses around the reception area.

Her continued success has placed Tosca on the preferred list of the most prestigious hotels, mansions, and wineries in the Greater Bay Area. Being so widely respected by her professional peers, I asked her to author the seventh edition of By Recommendation Only. During the past years she was invited as a speaker at professional meetings and conferences, interviewed by local TV and radio stations, and featured in newspapers and in leading wedding magazines.
